of the urgency of the Order and Cleanliness Ordinance by proclaiming it at once without waiting, as is customary, for the sanction of the Queen. Sanitary matters have for years past, during the late Administration, been allowed to drift without any attempt to promote the cleanliness of the Colony. Since, however, Mr. Chapwick made his report the Authorities have displayed every desire possible. The improvements in the system of drainage must necessarily be deferred for some-time, but the task of regulating the disposal of rubbish and offensive matter, the closing up of cesapools or drains, the keeping of pigs, gonts, or cattle, and other matters, can be undertaken, and has accordingly been grappled with. A host of sampans and small boats-some in very dilapidated condition-are permanently located there, the inhabitants of many being employed on shore. The Bay, which is slowly silting up, becomes shallower each year, and when the tide goes out a vast expanse of the foulest mud is left exposed, which, under the influence of a tropical sun, gives forth the most unwholesome vapours. It is simply marvellous that this reeking cesspool, for it is little better, the tides as a rule only creeping in, has not caused the outbreak of an epidethe tenant to purchase farms by means of state mic long ago. The regulation above quoted, if properly enforced, will certainly go far to work a cure, but it will doubtless excite some opposition from those marine equatters who believether have acquired a vested right to the particular position of which they have for so long held undisturbed possession. It would. however, we think, be worth while for the Government to consider whether it would not be advisable, at some early date, to reclaim that portion of Causeway Bay extending out as far as the old causeway. This is exceedingly shallow, and at low tides is a mere stretch of slimy mud. The cost of reclamstion would not be great and it would provide valuable sites both for Chinese houses and industrial undertakings. The outer portion of the Bay would still be available for a harbour of refuge and might be dredged if necessary. It would then he comparatively easy to prevent the Bay being made a fever bed, while a fine stretch of ground would be
